DIETZ CHAFES IN HIS NARROW CELL

Vanquished Master of Cameron Dam Misses Freedom and Fresh Air of Contry Home

THE STORY OF HIS SURRENDER
Remarkable Struggle in Sawyer County Unexpectedly Terminates with Surrender

HAYWARD, Wis., Oct. 10.—The first day in prison has been a trying one for John Dietz. The man who was lord and master of all he surveyed in the fastness of his Cameron dam clearing, paced the narrow confines of his keep all day Sunday. He misses the strong, enlivening, invigorating air of the forest and the exhilaration of a life of freedom to roam at will beneath the giant trees and demand the respect of all men through fear of his might.

Whether Dietz will be tried for the murder of Oscar Harp, the deputy, or for the assault of Bert Horel, on which he was arrested, will be determined today by District Attorney J. C. Davis after the inquest which Dr. W. F. Bucks, coroner of Sawyer county, will conduct in Winter today.

How Harp Was Killed.
The bullet which killed Harp entered the man's mouth, traveled the whole length of his body and started down the left leg.

Mrs. Dietz, Clarence and Leslie

Dietz, will be arraigned this afternoon before Judge Riordan of the municipal court of Hayward county on charges of complicity in the assault with intent to kill alleged to have been made in 1906 upon the persons of John Rogich and John Heft, two members of a party which attempted to rush the Dietz cabin and were repulsed.

Myra, as soon as she recovers from her wound, will be brought here and arraigned on a similar warrant.

The Surrender.
The final chapter in the Dietz story was written when the outlaw surrendered at 3:20 Saturday afternoon, after his cabin had been surrounded by sixty deputies, under the command of Sheriff Madden, and under fire since morning. The end did not come until one deputy had been killed and the ear of another shot off. Dietz himself was shot in his left hand.

Oscar Harp, aged 35, a deputy, was found dead on the hill behind the Dietz home. He had been shot through the head, while crawling toward the lumber piles.

Chet Colpitt, another deputy, returned to camp after the surrender with his right ear shot off.

Dietz has a serious wound through his left hand and a scratch on his face from the flying chips.

Father Pilon was instrumental in bringing about the surrender. Dietz said he surrendered at the solicitation of his wife, who is about to become a mother.

"I surrendered at the pleading of my wife, who is about to become a mother," said Dietz, after he had been handcuffed.

"I was afraid my wife and children would be killed. We were huddled in a corner behind boxes and you can go in the house there and see the bullets on the floor."

Leslie is Unhurt
"That is why I went out to the barn," said Leslie. "I figured that if I went away from the house those fellows would stop firing at the house. Leslie seemed to enjoy the situation. He stood about the house handcuffed and laughed and talked with the reporters and deputies.

Leslie walked and ran a distance of 250 or 300 yards while four deputies fired at him with quick firing rifles and yet he escaped without a scratch.

"Those fellows must have been scared or else they were mighty poor shots," he said, with a laugh. "They never came near hitting me."

Leslie stopped once and fired four or five shots at the men who were shooting at him.

Both father and son submitted, willingly, to the newspaper photographers. Mrs. Dietz and the younger children remained in the house, crying bitterly.

"I sat in the corner with Helen and little Johnny, hiding behind a trunk," said Mrs. Dietz. "I never fired a shot."

The surrender came suddenly following a day of exciting incidents. Fully 1,000 shots were fired in the course of the day. The Dietz homestead was riddled with bullets and the barn and outhouses also bore evidences of the fusillade that has been directed at the Dietz house intermittently all day.

End a Surprise
The news of Dietz's surrender reached Winter at a time when the whole city, or that part of it which was not participating actively in the siege on the cabin, had begun to believe that the hero of the Thornapple river would win out even against the heavy odds he faced.

This belief grew out of news brought a few hours earlier by a courier sent to Winter by Sheriff Madden for more ammunition for the attacking force. When this courier had left the clearing Dietz and his family were entering the third hour of their battle. At that time more than 1,000 bullets had been poured into the little cabin, and it was impossible to learn whether any of the defenders of the riddled log-house and barn had been wounded or killed. All that was certain was that some of the besieged force were alive, because each volley of the deputies was returned with shots from rifles and revolvers.

Whole Family Aided
The courier said the strategic position of the defenders was excellent. In the cabin Dietz and his wife guarded the front of the clearing, while the rear approach of the building was commanded by Leslie Dietz and his younger sister.

The younger boy, too small to handle a rifle or revolver, was believed to be safely hidden in the underground passage connecting the house with a root cellar several hundred feet distant. Some of the deputies, however, believed he was in the cabin with his father and mother, loading and cleaning their rifles, as he was enough of a hand with a gun to have performed that service and leave his parents free to give their undivided attention to the besieging force in front of them.

Before leaving on his return trip with the needed ammunition Sheriff Madden's courier said that official planned to set fire to the house and barn after nightfall unless the defenders had surrendered before that time.

First Shot Fired
The first shot in the battle was fired at 9:45 Saturday morning. At that time Leslie Dietz was out in the clearing after the cows. He was about an eighth of a mile from the cabin and each step was bringing him closer to a horseshoe shaped breastwork of stone built by the elder Dietz during his trouble with the lumber companies four years ago.

In this breastwork, which Dietz calls his "stronghold," Deputy Jack Britten was concealed, having crawled to it before daybreak from the woods a hundred yards or so in the rear. In these woods, along the edge of the clearing, a score or more deputies covered Britten's position.

Sheriff Madden during the night had countermanded his order to shoot any of the Dietz family on sight and had ordered his men to fire no shots until a demand for surrender had been made and refused.

Sister and Brother Escape
At the time Leslie was out after the cows the other members of the family were busy at their usual morning tasks. Dietz and his wife were in the cabin when the firing started, but their daughter, Helen, was starting to help Leslie round up the cows.

As Helen approached her brother Deputy Britten called upon the latter to surrender. Leslie made no reply, but turned toward the house and ran as fast as he could. Britten fired at him, and then four other deputies, the Rankin brothers, Con. Hollen and J. T. Campbell jumped up a hundred yards in the rear and also fired.

Leslie continued to run, unhit by any of the bullets, while Helen sought refuge in the barn.

Talk While Under Fire

When Leslie reached the shelter of the barn he turned and fired three shots from his revolver at Britten without effect. Apparently he did not know his sister was in the barn, for he kept on running toward the house when he saw he could not hit Britten, and was exposing himself to the fire of the other deputies.

When Leslie was half way between the barn and the house, running, his father stepped out to meet him. The boy then stopped running and walked defiantly to the elder Dietz. The two paused a moment, as if to talk over the situation, but the rifleman by that time had got the range and half a dozen bullets kicked up the dust at the feet of the father and son, who jumped, for the doorway of the cabin.

After that there was no cessation in the firing on either side, and at 11:15, just two hours and a half after the first shot, while an average of fifteen a minute were rattling against the logs and throwing dirt against the cabin, Leslie ran from the house to the barn, apparently escaping uninjured.

At 3:20 in the afternoon Dietz's daughter Helen appeared in the clearing in front of the cabin bearing a white flag, after a fierce battle had been waged for hours between the Dietz family in their cabin and barn and nearly 100 picked sharpshooters deputy sheriffs in the woods at the edge of the clearing.

Helen Dietz's appearance was the signal for a cessation of the deputies' fire. No shots had come from the house for several minutes before the little girl appeared.

Girl Comes Weeping

She walked bravely across the clearing and was met a few yards from the edge of the woods by Sheriff Madden. She was weeping and said her father had been shot in the head. She also said he would surrender if guaranteed safe conduct into Winter with his family.

This was promised, and Father Pilon, the Catholic priest at Winter, went to the cabin with Chief Deputy Fred Thorbahn to handcuff Dietz.

Apparently Dietz surrendered only after a wound had incapacitated him for further defense of his home. It appears that the outlaw of Cameron dam, unable to use a weapon himself, refused to allow his wife, second son, and young daughter to continue without his aid what he finally realized was an unequal battle.

Careless of danger either to his loved ones or himself, so long as he was able to carry out his role of their natural protector, the man whose successful warfare against a great lumber company and more recent defiance of the armed force of Sheriff Madden had made his name a household word over the entire country, preferred the lot of a prisoner to that of a noncombatant in a real fight.

The Final Surrender

Sheriff Madden refused to let the newspaper men go beyond the line. Father Pilon, the little priest, was permitted to pass the line after little Helen had said her father would surrender.

Father Pilon went up the long lane alone. A. S. Heffelfinger of Minneapolis, brother of "Pudge" Heffelfinger, the famous Yale football player, volunteered to accompany Helen back to the Dietz home and Sheriff Madden permitted him to go.

Five Deputies Missing
The attack was costly to the attackers, one being killed, and two, Chet Colpitt and James Rankin, deputy marshals, both wounded. Five others are missing, and the woods are being searched for them.

Despite the promise of the officials, there were threats heard that Dietz would be lynched. All of the saloons in Winter have been closed in an effort to prevent a disturbance.

A Cure for Smoky Lamps

To have lamps burning their brightest, the bowls should be kept full of oil and the burners free from oil and charred wick. The burners can easily be cleaned by boiling occasionally for half an hour in a strong solution of Gold Dust washing powder; wipe on a cloth and they will be as good as new. Clean the chimney by washing in warm water to which has been added a teaspoonful of Gold Dust washing powder, and wipe dry on a soft towel; polish with old newspaper.

SOON TO BUILD THE NEW "J S"

The steamer J. S., which was destroyed by fire, is to be replaced by a bigger and heavier excursion boat. This information is given out by Captain John Streckfuss, of the Acme excursion and packet line. It is expected that the contract for the steamer will be let soon.

The new boat will be propelled by a stern wheel. The hull will be 250 feet long, with a 51.4 beam, and there will be a 7.5 foot depth in the hold. The craft will be propelled by two powerful engines, and will have a carrying capacity of 3,500 people. One of the features of the boat will be a postless dance hall 140x35 feet. One year's time will be required to complete the boat.

TOMAH INDIANS ARE DEFEATED

La Crosse Takes Brace in Second Half and Come Out of Game Victoriously

A brace in the second half after poor defensive work in the first resulted in the La Crosse high school team walking all over the Tomah Indians in the game held at League park Saturday afternoon.

The final score was 18 to 6 for La Crosse.

Three touchdowns, a safety, and an oal kick tell the story of La Crosse's victory while a streak of luck was largely responsible for the six points totaled by the visitors.

"THE ROLL CALL"

When Senator La Follette read the record of a member of congress from a Chautauqua platform, the gentleman in question was mad. Was it not a time honored precedent that the votes of members should be kept from the eyes of their constituents? Was it not necessary for members to talk right at home and vote wrong in congress? And, if an upstart might be permitted to blurt it out, how was one to hold one's job at home and not lose caste with the big bosses in Washington?

But that was only the beginning. Senator La Follette continues to read the records of congressmen and senators. After he entered the senate he began putting senators on record by calling for the ayes and noes, and then he up and read these votes to the constituents of the senators.

That was interesting, and had educational value. Men in public life began to find that the word was no longer accepted for the deed. The smashing of idols began. Spokes in the wheels of the political machine began to fall out. It was indeed a demoralizing condition.

Then came La Follette's Magazine, and "The Roll Call." It was a column appearing once a week in which the votes of some public men were shown up. Sometimes the record was much to the credit of the member or the senator, and that helped establish him in the faith of his people. Sometimes the record was one of bad faith and corruption servitude, and that helped to dispose of a misrepresentative.

In the current issue of La Follette's "The Roll Call" is devoted to a review of the things that have happened to the men whose votes had been published in that column. We quote:

"The Roll Call helped to convey to the people of Minnesota the record of Senator Clapp's splendid service in the cause of honest tariff revision, according to true republican principles of protection, and the system opposition to his re-election to the senate, which was being so carefully organized a year ago, was drowned in the general acclaim with which he was endorsed for re-election by the republican state convention.

"The Roll Call told the people of Michigan of the devotion of Senator Burrows to Aldrichism and the interests, and the people of Michigan in a state-wide primary repudiated Burrows and nominated in his stead a candidate pledged to progressive republicanism.

"The Roll Call presented the record of Senator Warner of Missouri, a record of weakness and 'regularity'; the people of Missouri wanted to be shown, and Senator Warner announced his retirement as a candidate for re-election to the senate.

"The Roll Call told the people of Indiana of the courageous stand of Senator Beveridge in putting the system machine of the senate on record in the tariff revision and helped to confirm and strengthen the public sentiment which forced the overwhelming endorsement of Senator Beveridge for renomination by the republican convention of that state.

"The Roll Call made plain to the people of California the devotion of Senator Flint to Aldrichism and the system in the tariff revision. Flint is not a candidate for reelection.

"The Roll Call gave the people of Maine the rank and status of Senator Hale in the Aldrich machine. It was republished broadcast throughout the state. Senator Hale will shortly bow his farewell from the stage of American politics.

"The Roll Call told the people of Minnesota of their misrepresentation by Cannon's man, Tawney, in congress. Tawney was overwhelmingly defeated in the primaries for the republican nomination.

"The Roll Call gave the people of Iowa the records of Congressmen Smith, Kennedy and Hull. Smith and Kennedy won their renominations only after a desperate fight, and Kennedy only by a narrow margin, while Hull was defeated by a progressive republican.

"The Roll Call told the people of Kansas what the record showed of the services of Calderhead, Scott, Reeder and Miller to Cannonism and the system. The people nominated progressive republicans to replace them.

"The Roll Call proclaimed the system services of McKinley of California. The voters nominated in his place a republican who believes in government by the people.

"The Roll Call went into the home of the steel trust and exposed Dailzell, floor leader of the Cannon machine. Dailzell was renominated by a bare majority of 207 votes, whereas in years past, his majorities have been overwhelming.

"The Roll Call told the people of North Dakota the deserving record of Congressman Gronna. They promoted Gronna to the senate.

"The Roll Call carried to the people of Washington the record of Miles Poindexter, and its exemplification of fidelity to a public trust. Poindexter, over the opposition of organized system politics, over the opposition of Ballingerism and the federal administration, was nominated for the senate by an overwhelming majority, while Humphrey of Washington, whose record of service to the subsidy interests was exposed in the Roll Call, won a renomination by a margin so narrow that for many days the result was in doubt.

"The Roll Call gave the people of Oregon the 'me-too' record of its system team of Congressmen Ellis and Hawley. Hawley got through, but Ellis, whom Cannon in the tariff session had promoted to a position on the committee on ways and means, was defeated for renomination.

"The Roll Call gave the people of Wisconsin the progressive records of Congressmen Cooper and Nelson, whose renominations were being bitterly contested by system candidates. Both were renominated by overwhelming and increased majorities.

"The Roll Call analyzed for the voters the system-serving Cannon-faithful congressional career of Stafford of Wisconsin. Stafford was defeated in the primaries."

Taken all in all, it is a pretty good record. It shows that when the people know what their representatives are doing, they act with force and intelligence. "The Roll Call" helps the honest representative and does away with the dishonest representative. The logical outcome of its continuance must be that there will one day be no bad representatives. Let this good work proceed. The clerk will call the roll."

The hill of matrimony;
While they were on the upward way
She was his "ownest owney."

His words were never short or gruff,

Her Destination

A woman clerk in a government office, who enjoys a well-earned reputation for wit, "put one over" very adroitly on a young attorney. She announced that she was shortly going on her vacation, and the youthful cross examiner inquired the lady's destination.

"At Fishhook," was the reply.

"Where is that?" inquired the attorney.

"At the end of the line," was the smiling rejoinder.—Boston Record.

"Why do they say, 'As smart as a steel trap,' asked the talkative boarder. "I never could see anything particularly intellectual about a steel trap."

"A steel trap is called smart," explained the elderly person, in his sweetest voice, "because it knows exactly the right time to shut up."

More might have been said, but in the circumstances it would have seemed unfitting.—Punch.

A mother of four daughters, one of whom had recently married, cornered an eligible young man in the drawing room.

"And which of my girls do you most admire, might I ask?"

"The married one," was the prompt reply.—Scraps.

A Voter's Difficulty

COMMANDMENT NO. 4.

Thou shalt not believe all the glittering statements of the gilt-tongued advertising solicitor, nor accept as truth his claim of unpeeped million circulation. But thou shalt make an investigation and, having discovered said circulation to be an unknown quantity, thou shalt tell the liar to make a noise like a hoop the next time he doth call.

COMMANDMENT NO. 5.

Thou shalt not advertise without knowing whether thy shekels are bringing thee profitable returns; for, verily, there are more pleasing ways of wasting thy money than spending it on unprofitable advertising.

COMMANDMENT NO. 6.

Thou shalt not be like Tightwadde, the monk, nor have for thy motto, "I love to advertise, but oh! you cold cash." But thou shalt open thy purse-strings and purchase liberal quantities of space.

COMMANDMENT NO. 7.

If thy ads fail to pan out satisfactorily, thou shouldst not swear at thy office boy, nor raise Cain with thy stenographer, nor even kick thy cat down the stairway when thou dost go home at night. Rather, thou shouldst take thy proposition and study it carefully that thou mayest find out why it failed.

COMMANDMENT NO. 8.

Thou shouldst not be a fool merely because thou dost know how. If thou art a clown, thou shouldst not give exhibitions of thy antics in costly advertising space, but shouldst obtain a job with a circus where thy apish acts will be liberally recompensed.

COMMANDMENT NO. 9.

Thou shouldst not consider the people suckers nor attempt to inveigle them into the meshes of a fake scheme, for he that doth bunco the public discovereth at last that he is the greatest sucker since Adam.

COMMANDMENT NO. 10.

Thou shalt advertise all the time; not only in winter but also in summer, not only in prosperous times, but likewise in "hard" times; yea, all the year round, and then some, for he that doth shall always do a big business and get a good crack at the profits.

CARLETON
CASE
BY ELLERY H. CLARK

Once more he started on his homeward way, taking the old familiar short-cut through the woods, as the twilight deepened and the shadows of the tall elms lengthened down the quiet road. Still lost in thought, he strode along unheeding; then all at once, struck with a sense of something unfamiliar, he pulled up sharply and glanced about him. The path he was following now was new to him, there was something about it which he could not call to mind, tax his memory as he would. And then suddenly, as he turned a sharp corner, tucked away amid the shelter of a grove of birches which rose about it on every hand, a neat cottage appeared before his eyes.

For a moment he stood silent, staring in astonishment. Of this Henry had told him nothing. The Birches itself was still a good half mile away. "What in the world—" he muttered to himself, and then, obeying a sudden impulse, he turned aside, walked quickly up the path to the little house, mounted the steps leading to the porch, and knocked.

For a moment or two he waited. Then somewhere above him, a window opened; a woman's voice called low, "Is it you?"

At the sound Carleton threw back his head with an uncontrollable start of astonishment; and then, without raising his voice, he answered, "Yes, it's I."

The window closed. A moment still he waited in suspense, until the door cautiously opened. And then, suddenly, through the dusk there sounded a surprised cry, "Jack, Jack!"

Carleton took a quick step forward. Three long years, as far as seeing women of any attraction went, he had spent practically alone. Three long years, and in the girl before him what a change. Charming she had always been, yet now in looks, in dress, in bearing, in every way she had altered for the better a hundredfold. Almost with a gasp, the memories of old days came flooding over heart and mind and soul. His voice, when at last he spoke, sounded hoarse with stifled emotion; "Jeanne," he cried, "you!"

As of old, the woman seemed to dominate the situation. She laughed the old friendly laugh as she stepped backward into the gloom. Her words were commonplace enough, but not the tone in which she uttered them. "I'm glad to see you back, Jack," she said. "Won't you come in?"

CHAPTER XI.

The Events of an Evening.

"What mighty hills have not been done by woman!"—Ottway.

It was nearly seven o'clock when Jack Carleton strolled into the carriage house, to find Satterlee, sleeves rolled up, his big rubber apron tied around his waist, busy washing the carriages. Leisurely Carleton took his seat upon an inverted bucket, and lit a cigarette. "So you use a horse now and then, too, do you, Tom?" he asked, "it isn't all automobiles?"

Satterlee grinned a little ruefully. "To speak true, Mr. Jack," he answered, "we gets a lot of trouble out of that there machine. The gentlemen walked the last quarter mile tonight, and she's out there in the road yet. You see, we got a new universal joint."

Carleton raised his hand. "No, no," he cried, "you don't get me to listen to any of those yarns. I don't know anything about motors, and I don't want to. A horse is good enough for me. It isn't your automobile troubles I want to hear about, Tom. It's your own, if you have any, only I don't believe you have. As near as I can make out, you're an infernally lucky man."

The chauffeur nodded. "I am that, sir," he answered, readily enough. "No man could have had better luck, or more of it, than I've had the last year. It seems sometimes to me, Mr. Jack, like it couldn't really be so. It's been most too much for one man."

Jack nodded. "It was all a surprise to me," he said. "Mr. Carleton never told me he'd built you the house; I didn't even know you were married. I wouldn't know it now if I hadn't happened to stop in there on the way up from the train. I only did it out of curiosity, too. I wondered who on earth had built that house, so near the big one."

Satterlee's face lit up with pleasure. "I'm more than glad you did, sir," he said. "It's a neat little place, if I am saying so. And you were after seeing the Mrs., I suppose?"

Jack nodded again. "Yes, indeed, I did. She's prettier than ever, Tom. And she was telling me all about the house. So Mr. Carleton built it for you."

Satterlee pushed the wagon back into place, removed his apron, and took his stand in front of Carleton. "Yes, sir," he answered, "you see, it was like this. I always liked Jeanne fine—no one could help it, she's got that way with her—but I always thought as how she was more than a cut above me, being, as you might say, a lady, almost. And she nev'r'd have much to say to me, either, excepting to pass the time of day and such like things, you know, just friendly like, and nothing more. But about a year ago, of a sudden she began to seem to take more notice of me, and at last, never dreaming I was doing anything more than settle all my hopes of ever getting her, once and for all, I got that crazy about her I up and asked her—and she said she would. And then I didn't know what to do. I wanted to go to housekeeping, of course. I knew where I could rent a tidy little house down in the village, but I was feared of losing my job, if Mr. Carleton shouldn't seem to take kindly to the idea of it.

"Well, at last I told him, and he seemed pleased enough, and asked me about my plans, and so on, and finally he said he'd like to think it over for a while. So I said all right, of course, and one evening he came down here, and talked a long time, about how fine a thing it was to be married—he spoke something beautiful about his poor dear lady—and said as how that I'd always done my work right, and been a faithful man to him, and as how he knew Jeanne was a fine girl, and so on, and finally that he'd hate to have me leave him—I got scared then—but he didn't want me so far away from the village, and so, if I'd like it, partly for me, and partly for a good example to the rest of the house, he'd build me a cottage right here on the place, and set me up to housekeeping there. And that he did, and you've seen the cottage for yourself, so there's no need of my saying what a neat little place it is, or how happy we are. I like it fine, and Jeanne even more than me, I believe; you know what it is for a woman to have her own home to fuss round with; flowers and a vegetable garden, and all such things. We couldn't be better fixed in all the wide world."

Carleton slowly nodded. "Well, I should say not," he said at length. "And about the money, too. Jeanne was talking me of that."

Satterlee's face brightened. "Wasn't that the geatost ever?" he said. "I never knew she had relatives so well fixed as that; I guess she didn't either; but Mr. Carleton looked after all the law part of it for her, and it seems she gets a steady income for the rest of her life. Not so much, of course, for some folks, but for her, you see, it's just pin money, to do as she likes with. Of course I'd never touch a cent of it; I'm doing pretty well myself, and I live simple, anyway; but she likes her fine clothes, and her trip in town, same as all the women do, and I'm glad to let her have the fun. Sometimes I get let off, too, but I don't like to go often; there's plenty doing here with six horses, and that rascal of a car. And this summer she's going off for two months to the mountains with some friends of hers. You see, the work gets slackier then; Mr. Carleton always goes away about that time, and it's pretty hot here, of course, for a woman, anyway. Yes, Jeanne's quite the lady now, and no one more glad than me."

Carleton, again nodding thoughtfully, sat for some time in silence without looking up. At last he raised his eyes to the chauffeur's. "Tom," he said, speaking with unwonted gravity, "I'd like to ask you one question. What do you really think?" Abruptly he broke off. "Well, speaking of angels," he muttered, and again was silent.

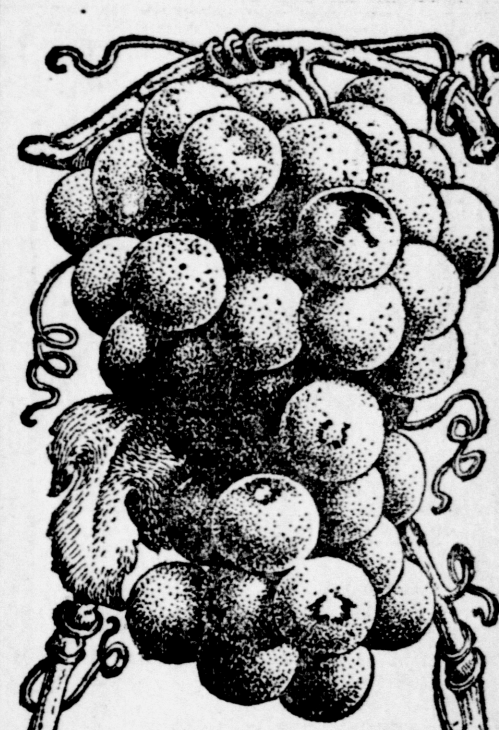

Down the drive Henry Carleton was walking briskly toward them, with a step that a youth of twenty might have envied. As he entered the carriage house, he eyed the pair a trifle keenly, it seemed, yet when he spoke his tone was amiability itself. "Ah, Jack," he said, "I wondered where you'd gone. Talking over old times with Satterlee, I suppose. We dine at seven, you know."

Carelessly Jack Carleton answered him. "Yes, I know. I'll be ready. Lots of time yet."

There was nothing in the words at which offense could be taken, yet at the tone Henry Carleton's eyebrows were raised a trifle. "Suit yourself," he said, "as long as you're not late," then turning to the chauffeur. "It's unfortunate about the motor, isn't it, Satterlee? I understand you to say that you can't possibly have it fixed before tomorrow night?"

Satterlee shook his head. "Oh, no, sir, not possibly," he answered. "I shall have to go in town tomorrow morning, and see them at the factory. And then there's a good half day, just on labor alone. No, sir, tomorrow night would be the very earliest possible."

Henry Carleton's face clouded a trifle, and for a moment he thought in silence. Then he spoke, with a little reluctance evident in his manner. "I don't like to ask you to do it, Satterlee, but I can't see any other way. I've promised to send a message over to Mr. Sheldon tonight, a message which is of great importance

TWO BIG ENGINES
PASSTHROUGH CITY

Immense Locomotives Are Seen at North Side Enroute to City of Duluth

Two heavy traffic engines of the latest type stopped at the north side Milwaukee yards this morning on their way from Philadelphia to Duluth, where they will be used in the heavy lake traffic by the Duluth, Mesaba and Northern Railroad company. The two engines are the largest that have ever been seen in this part of the country and a great deal of interest is being taken in them, as the Milwaukee road expects to put some of the same kind on the road in the near future.

The length of the engine is 104 feet from pilot to pilot and has eight sets of driving wheels, single engine wheel, trucks and trailer, a total of twenty wheels, and has two separate boiler shelves moulded together at the waist which allows the engine to make sharp curves with the ease of the small locomotive. These engines were manufactured solely for the purpose of heavy traffic and while they will pull larger trains than the smaller engine they will not travel as fast. The boiler will hold 10,000 gallons of water and the tender about 30 tons of coal.

"BERLY M" GOES ON LONG TRIP

Charles Gardner, George Smith and Frank Srneec left Winona Sunday morning on a two hundred mile trip down the river in the high-powered motorboat "Berly M," the property of and manufactured by the Winona Boat and Machine Works. The trip is being made primarily for demonstrating purposes and the objective point is Savannah, Ill.

The "Berly M" is claimed to be the fastest boat on these waters, covering twenty-eight miles an hour. It is thirty-two feet long with a four foot beam and was constructed for speed purposes. It is a handsome craft and is certain to demand the attention of speed boat enthusiasts in all of the cities she visits.

Stop to Demonstrate
It is planned to make stops at all of the principal cities on the downriver trip and for that reason no attempt will be made to establish a record for speed or endurance.

On the return trip the "Alma May," the magnificent pleasure and cruising boat turned out by the Winona plant early last spring and given into possession of a resident of Savannah, will be taken back and placed in winter quarters. The "Alma May" has been the pride of boats in that section the past summer.

Experienced Men
The three men, who will make the trip, are experienced motorboat owners, Mr. Gardner being one of the proprietors of the Winona Machine and Boat works. They hope to be able to make the entire trip and return by the latter part of this week.

ELKHORN RAS FINE
BUNC OF SPANIELS

George Elkhorn, who lives on "Stony Point," about two miles above the Milwaukee railroad bridge, is the owner of the finest full blooded cocker spaniel pups ever seen in this vicinity.

Elkhorn is something of a dog fancier, recently having sold a full blooded pointer and a litter of six and intends selling two of the three and keeping the other for hunting purposes. He values the spaniels at five dollars apiece.

NO INDIGESTION
OR SICK STOMACH

Heartburn, Gas, Sourness, Headache and Dyspepsia go and you will feel fine in five minutes.

Take your sour, out-of-order stomach—or maybe you call it indigestion, Dyspepsia, Gastritis or Catarrh of Stomach; it doesn't matter—take your stomach trouble right with you to your Pharmacist and ask him to open a 50-cent case of Pape's Diapiesin and let you eat one 22-grain Triangule and see if within five minutes there is left any trace of your former misery.

The correct name for your trouble is Food Fermentation—food souring; the digestive organs become weak, there is lack of gastric juice; your food is only half digested, and you become affected with loss of appetite, pressure and fullness after eating, vomiting, nausea, heartburn, griping in bowels, tenderness in the pit of stomach, bad taste in mouth, constipation, pain in limbs, sleeplessness, belching of gas, biliousness, sick headache, nervousness, dizziness or many other similar symptoms.

If your appetite is fickle and nothing tempts you, or you belch gas, or if you feel bloated after eating, or your food lies like a lump of lead on your stomach, you can make up your mind that at the bottom of all this there is but one cause—fermentation of undigested food.

Prove to yourself in five minutes that your stomach is as good as any; that there is nothing really wrong. Stop this fermentation and begin eating what you want without fear of discomfort or misery.

Almost instant relief is waiting for you. It is merely a matter of how soon you take a little Diapiesin.

REPUBLICANS TO START CAMPAIGN

Orators will Cover Every County in Wisconsin Beginning Next Week

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 10.—The republican state committee is planning to send out speakers for the campaign next week.

This will give about three weeks of stump speaking and a full corps of speakers will be kept busy, every county in the state being visited. Appeals have been addressed to some of the leading speakers in the western state by Secretary Essmann on the ground that Senator La Follette's hospital experience will keep him out of the campaign, and that his friends should rally to his aid. It is expected there will be a response similar to that which made the recent primary campaign memorable for the number of men from without the state who spoke here.

C. H. Crownhart, named for attorney general by the state committee, is in Washington, but is expected to arrive in Milwaukee Tuesday or Wednesday to take up the work of directing the campaign in the doubtful assembly and senate districts.

LIBERTY LEAGUE
ASKS LEGISLATION

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 10.—Among the resolutions adopted yesterday by the Milwaukee county convention of the Liberty league was one which recites the action of many fraternal and benevolent associations in creating prohibited occupations and forfeiting the membership of those who engage in these occupations, often after members have contributed to the reserve fund of the association for years. The executive committee was authorized to draft a bill for presentation to the next legislature, declaring such action void on the ground that it is unwarranted and unjust.

MANUEL'S QUEEN
MAY PLAY HERE

Dancer who Dethroned Boy Monarch Asks Guarantee of $600 for Each Performance

VIENNA, Oct. 8.—Gaby Deslys, whose twinkling toes danced a nation into a revolution and kicked a kingly crown from the youthful head of Manuel of Portugal, is considering three cabled offers from American theatrical managers. The dancer declared today that contracts probably would be closed by cable calling for her appearance in New York during the present season.

While waiting for the result of her cabled conferences with the American manager, Gaby Deslys has been in communication with Manuel, who is on board the Portuguese royal yacht Queen Amelie in Gibraltar harbor.

"Happy, Happy, Happy" she almost sang today as she received the United Press correspondent. "I have heard from the king. The dangers through which he has passed have not been sufficient to make him forget me. From Gibraltar he has sent me a lone cabled message of love. I believe he will meet me in Paris on Oct. 16, as he had planned. Then I will show him that though his own people have turned against him Gaby Deslys is still loyal."

Mlle. Deslys refused to show the cablegram or quote from it, declaring that the message, filled with the love of her subject, the king, was too sacred for other eyes than her own. That there is truth in her statement is borne out by the press cables from Gibraltar that the Duke of Oporto, the king's uncle, landed yesterday afternoon from the royal yacht in Gibraltar and dispatched several lengthy cablegrams. Manuel evidently considered a love message to his sweetheart too important to be entrusted to other than royal hands.

$600 a Performance

In an exclusive interview Thursday with the United Press representative, Mlle Deslys declared that she considered it no disgrace to be the mistress of a king but that she would consider it a disgrace to advertise her relationship for financial gain. Evidently she has changed her mind and now intends to capitalize her escapades with the deposed monarch. To each of the three American offers received yesterday and today she replied that she would go to America for a guarantee of $600 a performance. In her first interview with the United Press correspondent she exhibited what she termed an "immense contract" to show that her own income was greater than that of King Manuel. This contract called for a three months' engagement in Berlin, two performances a day. For this she was to receive $25,000—slightly less than $140 a performance. Now, however, that she can be advertised as the "sweetheart who cost a kingdom" Deslys thinks she is more valuable as an artist.

Cheers and Catcalls

The Apollo theater, where she is now appearing, has never before accommodated such crowds as have jammed its doors nightly during the present week. Her act is greeted with cheers and catcalls intermingled, but she still wears the rare diamonds and pearls Manuel showered upon her.

A World Beauty

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Florenz Ziegfeld, Jr., the musical comedy producer, and the husband of Anna Held, announced to the United Press that he had captured the prize for which producers of America are fighting—the right to bill Mlle Deslys' services a year ago and three months ago signed a contract to pay her $500 a week.

"I consider Deslys one of the most beautiful women in the world," declared Ziegfeld. "I have known her personally for a long time and have had an eye on her for my New York theater. When I was abroad this summer I signed her up to a contract to open her Thanksgiving week."

Didn't Know Escapades

"I must be awfully slow," continued the producer, "for at the time I was in Europe I knew nothing of her alleged escapades with King Manuel. I signed her up because of her wonderful beauty and dancing and singing. I cabled my European representative yesterday in Vienna to ascertain if she will be present at the time her contract calls for. I am doing this as a matter of self-protection."

Ziegfeld's fear that Deslys would break her contract is evidently borne out by the Vienna cables to the United Press that she is in communication with three American managers, to each of whom she fixed her terms at $600 a performance.

She's Only Twenty

"Deslys is now only twenty years old," said Ziegfeld, "with a piquant French figure and manner. She is pronounced a natural blonde and a wonderful dancer who has long captivated Paris. She opened as a child of fifteen in the Olympic theater in Paris and made an instant hit. Her most notable success was with 'Fred Wriffit in the Moulin Rouge' in Paris. Later her jiu jitsu dance became internationally famous and has been copied by numberless imitators."

Legal Tangles Impend

That Deslys will not appear in the Ziegfeld houses without a legal fight was forecasted by William Norris, the producer, who says he, too, has

Supreme Court of North Dakota Declares it Undue Restriction of Voter's Rights

BISMARCK, N. D., Oct. 10.—The 30 per cent clause of the North Dakota primary law which declares that a candidate for nomination must have 30 per cent of the number of votes cast for the successful candidate for secretary of state at the last preceding general election in order to get on the general election ballot was declared unconstitutional by the supreme court of the state. The contention of the court was that it was an undue restriction upon the right of voters to run for office.

MELON THIEVES ARRESTED SUNDAY

Oliver Gullickson, Supt. of Insane Asylum, Makes Capture After Chase

Four alleged watermelon thieves were arrested at West Salem Sunday by Superintendent of the County Insane Asylum Oliver Gullickson, after a sensational and lengthy chase through the surrounding country.

The insane asylum has long boasted of the great watermelon crop of 1910 but since the ripening of the colored man's favorite fruit the authorities there have been bothered by several young men from West Salem who insisted on taking melons.

Whether it was his trip to La Crosse Saturday night to attend the Elks' social center that prompted his attempt to arrest the alleged culprits is not known. At any rate the superintendent laid in wait among the melons Sunday morning and when the alleged culprits appeared he jumped out. They ran but he pursued them overtaking the entire band and bringing them to La Crosse. This morning they paid fines of $5 and costs apiece.

DAME NATURE HINTS When the Food is Not Suited

When Nature gives her signal that something is wrong it is generally with the food. The old Dame is always faithful and one should act at once.

To put off the change is to risk that which may be irreparable. An Arizona man says:

"For years I could not safely eat any breakfast. I tried various kinds of breakfast food, but they were all soft, starchy messes which gave me distressing headaches. I drank strong coffee, too, which appeared to benefit me at the time, but added to the headaches afterwards. Toast and coffee were no better, for I found the toast very constipating."

"A friend persuaded me to quit the old coffee and the starchy breakfast foods, and use Postum and Grape-Nuts instead. I shall never regret taking his advice. I began using them three months ago."

"The change they have worked in me is wonderful. I now have no more of the distressing sensations in my stomach after eating, and I never have headaches. I have gained 12 pounds in weight and feel better in every way."

"Grape-Nuts make a delicious as well as a nutritious dish, and I find that Postum is easily digested and never produces dyspepsia symptoms. There's a reason."

Every one repairing watches claim to be expert workmen, but forty-nine out of fifty do more harm than good to the watch they are repairing. It is any wonder that good watches fail to keep time and the owner is often compelled to buy a new one, when the old one could be repaired and made a perfect time piece if you only knew where to take it?

We run our repair department in the most careful manner and test every watch after being repaired until it proves a perfect time keeper. We are not low price workmen, but feel sure that the satisfaction in having your work done here is worth the difference in cost.

HUMAN SKIN LUCKY FOR LA CROSSE MAN

Attorney Hartwell Has Piece from Corpse which He Swears Is His Horseshoe

Does Attorney Fred H. Hartwell of this city win his cases by reason of carrying a rabbit's foot, a piece of tanned human skin or other charm or by pure human ability? This is the question mooted by the courts of Toledo, Ohio, and the newspapermen of that city, according to stories that have just reached here.

Mr. Hartwell defended John Eynon, a chiropractor charged with practicing medicine and surgery without a license. Special Counselors Cohn and Froehlich of the Ohio attorney general's office prosecuted, assisted by Secretary Matson of Columbus, Ohio, secretary of the state board. The case was tried before Judge O'Brien O'Donnell and after the jury was out twenty-four hours almost to the minute it reported its refusal to convict, nine members standing out for acquittal.

Mr. Hartwell had been retained to conduct the defense of another case in the same court by defendant who saw him work in the Eynon case and in discharging the jury Judge O'Donnell asked Mr. Hartwell if he objected to trying the new case on the thirteenth. The attorney replied that he was not superstitious.

"Whether superstitious or not," said the judge, "I want to state right here that I think you had a rabbit's foot in your pocket when you defended Eynon. Your man was clearly guilty under the law. I charged the jury to find him guilty. You told them not to. The attorney general's force argued that I was right. A goodly majority of the jury seem to have disregarded me altogether. I've a mind to fine you all for contempt of court," and the judge chuckled and adjourned court.

After Mr. Hartwell had gone on to New York it developed that after leaving La Crosse a friend had given him a nicely tanned and tattooed strip of human skin out of which to make a card case. While he had no rabbit's foot in his pocket in Toledo he did have this human skin. And therein the newspapermen found a good story.

"Just a case of right prevailing," said Mr. Hartwell today. Dr. Eynon will probably not be prosecuted again.

Mr. Hartwell returned from the east this morning.

CATARRH

A SPECIFIC BLOOD IMPURITY

Catarrh is a deep-seated blood disease, one which no amount of local treatment will ever permanently cure. The beneficial effects of washes, sprays, inhalations, etc., are only temporary, and when left off the old condition returns, because the blood is infected with catarrhal matter and impurities. This impure condition of the circulation irritates and inflames the delicate mucous membranes and tissues and produces the well known symptoms of ringing noises in the head and ears, mucus in the throat, headaches, watery eyes, partial deafness, sore throat, general impairment of health, etc. This condition will remain, growing worse as long as the catarrhal matter is allowed to remain in the blood. Being a specific blood impurity, there is only one way to cure Catarrh, and that is to purify the blood. Nothing equals S.S.S. for this purpose. It attacks the disease at its head—in the circulation—and by thoroughly renovating the blood and cleansing it of all impure matter, makes a permanent and lasting cure of the disease. For forty years S.S.S. has been recognized as the best blood purifier, and the thousands of cases of Catarrh it has cured is proof that it is the very medicine needed by those who suffer with this trouble. Book on Catarrh and any medical advice free.

TWO TOWNS HAVE BEEN DESTROYED

mill at Stave Mills and fifty odd residences were destroyed. All available hose and fire fighting apparatus is in use, and appeals for assistance have been sent to towns in a large radius.

2000 Missing

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 10.—The list of dead near Beaudette and in the Rainy River forest fire district is steadily growing but the total has not yet been established. Some 2000 residents of Spooner, Beaudette and Pitt, Minn., are missing, most of whom are safe in Rainy River and the adjacent towns on the Canadian side. The most serious aspect of the missing include the homesteaders and farmers in the bush for a distance of 100 miles east and twenty miles south of whom absolutely nothing can be learned for some time as searching parties do not dare penetrate the still smoking forests through which the cyclone of fire has swept.

Warroad, Minn., is in great danger from forest fires, which this morning are gradually creeping toward that town. Two special trains left here at 6 o'clock last night over the Canadian Northern Railroad with fire apparatus and supplies.

Warroad is crowded with a thousand refugees and fires are burning all around it. The refugees are terror-stricken. The fire is spreading this way and now only several miles from Sprague, Man., which is 20 miles northwest of Warroad.

A fire is also coming down from the north of Sprague where it has burned great quantities of cordwood, ties and telegraph poles awaiting shipment.

The situation is that the present forest conflagration is the greatest since the Hinckley, Minn., horror fifteen years ago. The dead are variously estimated from 200 to 500. In the confusion it is hard to estimate the missing but an exchange of messages between refugee centers shows that over 100 settlers, principally from around Beaudette have not been reported. Distress will be terrible this week.

International Disaster

While a high wind is sweeping a fire on the south side of Rainy River at a velocity of 50 miles an hour, the great body of flames has passed this section, revealing a calamity that already reaches the proportion of an international disaster. Sixty blackened corpses have been found in the path of the flames and a vast area is yet to be searched for dead while the towns of Spooner, Beaudette and Pitt have been totally destroyed with a property loss that cannot be intelligently calculated at present.

Railroad and wire communications with the scene of the great disaster to the west are cut off by a burned district between Rainy River and Warroad, Minn., on the Canadian Northern Railroad for a distance of forty miles, through which the last trains passed last night at the peril of the lives of the crew. The road is open to the south, and east, however, and relief is being afforded from Fort William.

The most interesting description of the holocaust is given by James Ramsey, a well known citizen of Spooner. Ramsey said:

One Man's Description

"I was several miles south of Beaudette when I first heard the roar of the flames. I started to run to the town, but the fire was coming fast and was very close. I caught up with a man who was accompanied by a woman and a baby. They were exhausted and I grabbed the child and fled. There was a wall of flame ahead of us but the wind shifted and we passed through. I can't understand how any of the homesteaders of that section can have escaped. I believe this fire will go through hundreds of miles of brush and timber and hundreds of people will perish."

Trains have been run through suffocating smoke and burning bridges and timbers, but regardless of danger to the crews. The most dramatic incidents were those connected with the escape of 2,000 fu-gives in a long train of box cars. The mob of men, women and children waited for the train while their homes were in flames and the roar of falling timber was harrowing in the extreme.

The first train load steamed across to Rainy River with men hanging to the sides and to the trucks. Women were given first place. Many of those left started running down the tracks and perished thus. Others with great courage stood to their ground and were rescued by the second train. On this side of the line there seemed to be no danger until late in the afternoon when a small fire which had been smoldering for several days was fanned to a flame. It was near Big Rat Portage Lumber Company's mill and the plant and great piles of lumber were roaring in an instant.

Again the terror-stricken fugitives prepared to depart, as it looked as if Rainy River must go the way of Beaudette. Trainmaster Nelson, unflinching courage and resourcefulness is responsible for saving hundreds, prepared a long line of box cars and the fugitives scrambled about. Many Rainy River citizens prepared to desert their homes but they were not panic-stricken as were the poor fugitives from the other side.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Oct. 10.—A fund of $2,000 is to be subscribed immediately by representative business men of the Twin Cities for the temporary relief of those who have suffered from the forest fires in the northern part of the state. The money will be distributed through the Red Cross Society.

Property Loss $10,000,000. SPRAGUE, Ont., Oct. 10.—The village of Longworth is burning and the hundred inhabitants and 200 refugees who were there are fleeing for their lives.

A. K. Stanning, editor of the Warroad Plain Dealer, says the property loss will reach $10,000,000, and that the loss of life will be appalling.

500 Dead at Least

WINNIPEG, Man., Oct. 10.—A train from Duluth reached here over the Canadian Northern railroad today, having got through the fire zone. K. K. Cameron, superintendent of the Canadian Northern, says at least 500 are dead. It is stated that seventy-five dead are in the morgue at Deautette.

FIFTY ENTOMBED MINERS ALL DIE

done chamber carrying his open lamp and that the accumulation of dust exploded.

The mine itself is one mile from the town of Starville, six miles southwest of here. In the town all night long women, racked by torture of uncertainty, walked up and down the mountain paths that lead to the black hole in which their husbands or brothers have been walled into an unknown fate.

Many Heroic Acts

Sunday was a day of heroic acts. Miners, whose comrades are below in the pit, fought valiantly to gain an entrance. Again and again they penetrated a mile into the main tunnel, only to be driven back or carried out. Physicians and nurses who waited to minister to the men walked in found their hands full caring for the rescuers.

The miners' cottages were scenes of tragedy. One Italian mother, whose husband is among the victims, gathered her brood of eight children about her and bade them kneel in prayer, planning to kill them as they knelt to free them from the hardships of the fatherless. Friends interfered and prevented the tragedy.

Many Were Married

Most of the entombed men—even now counted as dead by their comrades—were married. Many had large families and a movement started today by their surviving comrades to make provision for the families.

The mining company today gave out a list of miners who are missing and are believed to be dead. Six are Americans, one a negro and the remainder Mexicans, Poles and Italians.

The mine has always been considered safe and non-gaseous and this is the first accident during the 25 years it has been operated.

So safe has it been considered that during a recent automobile reliability tour from Kansas City to Denver,

TARIFF PLANK IS BEST ONE POSSIBLE

That Is Stand Taken by Col. Roosevelt on Objectionable Feature

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 10.—In a speech today at the Arkansas state fair, Colonel Theodore Roosevelt took a position conflicting with that of President Taft on the question of the drainage of swamp lands. The colonel declared that the national government should do its part in reclaiming swamp lands and cited the situation of Arkansas, Louisiana and Missouri as a case where the national government should take a hand.

He argued that as the drainage of swamp lands in one of these states would turn the water into the other states, making the swamp drainage an interstate proposition. The Arkansas cheered this sentiment wildly. In his speech at the conservation congress at St. Paul President Taft declared that swamp drainage was not the business of the federal government.

What He Could Get The colonel came into the west prepared to defend his position on the tariff question, criticized because of the apparent inconsistency between the colonel's western speeches and the New York platform tariff plank. He outlined his position at Atlanta where he repudiated the New York plank as a proposition for which he will tell the Hoosiers when he will take the stump for Beveridge this week.

A party of 200 persons was whirled in motor cars on a pleasure trip two miles along the main tunnel into the mine. According to the rules of the company blasting and shooting within the mine are forbidden.

Tunnel Caves In

At the point where the explosion occurred the tunnel has caved in for nearly 2,000 feet, leaving a solid wall of earth and rock nearly a mile long through which the rescuers must penetrate. The first fan from the entrance was located in the main tunnel about two miles from the opening of the shaft and the second fan was located at the first haulage way crossing the main tunnel.

Both of these interior fans were wrecked by the explosion, rendering it imperative that new fans be installed before rescuers can make much headway.

A Pathetic Tragedy The most pathetic tragedy of the camp is that of Anita Gonzales, wife of one of the imprisoned men. From the hour of the explosion she haunted the mouth of the tunnel waiting for some word. In her arms she carried her baby of ten months. Late Sunday she was walking up and down the tracks with her child. The babe reached up from its mother's shoulders and clasped one of the trolley wires heavily charged with electricity.

The child stiffened and died in her arms. The mother has lost her reason.

Pilgrimage of Broken Hearts Again at daybreak today the pilgrimage of broken hearts over the hills began. Women climbed the steep path from the village, most of them carrying dinner buckets, hoping against hope that their husbands might be brought alive. If they came, the foreign women wanted to be sure that "their men" were not going hungry. Upon the Uppendime family the tragedy bears heavily. The father and his oldest son are entombed. Five children mourn with their mother. The son's young widow and two babies also await a message from the hills.

Owners Refused Safeguards One of the ironies of the situation is the presence in Trinidad of Colonel Roberts of the United States department of mines. For months Roberts has been working to establish a rescue bureau for the district with trained workers under government control. That the effort was blocked, it is said, by the refusal of the coal companies to contribute a site at Trinidad for the bureau.

LAJOIE'S VICTORY
PROBABLY "FIXED"

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—New York baseball fans want to know whether Larry Lajoie was entitled to the eight hits he made in yesterday's double header at St. Louis, which decided the batting supremacy in his favor as against Ty Cobb and incidentally won for him an automobile. The report that the St. Louis infielders shirked and loafed on Lajoie's grounders and turned them into safeties had aroused the baseball colony and local sport writers are asking whether another baseball scandal will have to be aired.

It is considered significant that seven of Lajoie's eight hits were infield grounders. As Larry is not the swiftest man in the game the opinion prevails that the St. Louis infield deliberately "threw" the batting honors his way.

If Larry won honestly, he has the laugh on Ty Cobb, who, in a signed article recently, said that Lajoie was an old time slugger rather than a scientific hitter, such as himself.

Were the St. Louis infielders "fixed" or not? The answer is "Every hit I made in the double header played in St. Louis was on the square," declared Second Baseman Lajoie of the Cleveland team here today. "I did not speak to a St. Louis player about my batting average, asked no favors from anyone and worked my head off to make the safe drives I collected."

"After my first hit, a clean drive to center for three bases, the St. Louis players played expecting me to pound the ball out every time. I fooled them the next time up by beating out a bunt and knowing that a bunt would be unexpected every time up I continued to lay the ball down and beat it out. Not only was every hit I made a clean drive but the St. Louis scorer cheated me out of one hit in the third inning of the second game. With a man on third I bunted the ball down the left field line. Corridon nor any other player could have handled the ball in time to get either of us. Instead of crediting me with a hit, as should have been done, the official scorer gave the fielder an error and me a sacrifice hit. Instead of eight hits in eight times at bat, I should have had nine safe drives put to my credit in that many trips to the plate."

Newspaper "Bunk"
CHICAGO, Oct. 10.—A lot of the officials of the American league today styled the reports sent out from St. Louis that the infielders of the Browns "laid down" in the games with Cleveland yesterday so that Larry Lajoie could fatten his batting average and beat out "Ty" Cobb for the automobile. There will be no official investigation of the charges unless they take some definite form, according to Secretary McElroy and at present are merely regarded as the mutterings of "war correspondents" seeking to liven up the end of the season.

"If any responsible or interested person sees fit to make charges against the St. Louis team, they will be investigated," said McElroy, "but we do not make a practice of running down every wild rumor that is circulated."

The batting averages of Cobb and Lajoie may be given over and the regular league averages are made up, according to McElroy but even at that it will be sometime before they can be officially announced.

"Must Verify Records"
The records of all official scorers must first be gone over and the averages verified. This may take until the "snow flies."

The averages of the two leading batters will be figured first. Chicago fans take the St. Louis charges as a joke. Cobb is charged with having run away from Chicago last week to escape playing the last two games here. The "Georgia Peach" has never been able to hit the White Sox pitchers and it helped his average more to lay off than to play.

NELSON FIGHTS
DALE TONIGHT

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 10.—Battling Nelson will attempt to demonstrate to fight fans tonight that he can "come back" in a ten round bout with Monte Dale of Denver before the Grand Avenue Athletic Club here. Fight bugs attach much importance to the battle for the reason that this is the Hewish warrior's stunt on the return trip from "has beenville." A good showing by the Dane means an opportunity to "get on" other important battles. Marty Kane and Roy Campbell will fight a preliminary of ten rounds.

YALE TEAM IS BEING PUSHED HARD

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Oct. 10.—Convinced that the time has come for the Yale team to "show something," the coaches will drive the blue squad harder than ever this week. There is no concealing the fact that Head Coach Coy and his assistants are disappointed over the showing made up to date and are reading with apprehension the glowing accounts that come from Cambridge.

Heretofore green material has been the pleading in excuse of low scores.

GLOOM AT CORNELL

ITHACA, N. Y., Oct. 10.—Something approaching real gloom pervades the Cornell football camp today. The 0 to 9 score against Oberlin Saturday was a rude shock to Cornell's followers and served to dash the hopes that were kindled by Cornell's good work earlier in the season. The red and white line is the weakness and unless it can be stiffened greatly the students are speculating as to the havoc that the big teams will work. Coach Reed blames it all on the fact that the men have not mastered the new style of play but he has not explained why Cornell's deficiency should be more glaring than the others.

BANTAMWEIGHT BATTLE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—A rattling bantamweight battle is looked for tonight at the Olympic Athletic club when Phil McGovern and Young O'Leary will go ten rounds. McGovern is determined to freshen up his laurels a bit after an unexpected setback in his last fight. In Young O'Leary, however, he will face a hard man and one who has never entered the ring except in the best of condition.

DROP KICKERS
ARE IN DEMAND

So Declare Men who Are in a Position to Know what's Wanted

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—"Give us drop kickers."

This is the cry now going up from the various football camps. Nearly every game this season has emphasized the fact that, under the new rules the value of a good drop kicker has been greatly enhanced.

Saturday's games particularly pointed this moral. A long list of shut outs where the losing teams came almost within sight of a score but failed through the inability of a sure-toed kicker, proved that hereafter the coaches will have to pay more attention to this feature of the game. The new rule preventing the pushing or hauling of the man carrying the ball by his teammates and which cuts down interference for the runner to a negligible quantity makes it extremely difficult the attack of rushing when the team is fighting stubbornly in the shadow of its own goal posts.

This weakness is so apparent that already there is a strong demand, in which Mike Murphy is taking the lead for a change in the rules, making it necessary to gain but five yards on four downs when within the 25 yard line.

AFTER BASERUNNING RECORD

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—The coming series between the New York Giants and Highlanders will give Daniels, the fleet left fielder of the Highlanders, a chance to try to beat the record made by Hans Lobert yesterday in circling the bases in 13 4-5 seconds. New York fans believe Daniels is the fastest man in the game, not excepting Josh Devore of the Giants or Cobb of Detroit. They have seen the speedy Dutchman of the Reds and are confident that Daniels can clip a fifth of a second from his record.

DENY ITALIANS
MURDERED RICE

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—That any connection exists between the arrest at Brooklyn of Pietro Tomassello and Mrs. Josephine Fruscione, two Italians, and the murder at Cleveland on August 6 of Wm. L. Rice, wealthy clubman and lawyer, was denied by the New York Pinkerton agency today. The two Italians were traced here from Cleveland, but the Pinkerton agency insists Tomassello is only wanted on a charge of robbing Mrs. Anna Padovi, of Bluestone, O., of $13, while the woman was owned solely on the allegation of having swindled jewelry stores at Cleveland.

FIRE AT FOND DU LAC

FOND DU LAC, Wis., Oct. 10.—A fire resulting from crossed wires played havoc with the big warehouses of the Fond du Lac Cheese and Butter company here yesterday. It is believed that the $150,000 stock of cheese has been damaged by smoke and water so as to be unfit for use.

organization, similar in scope and attainment fourteen years ago.

E. T. Berg, original organizer of the Holmen Cadets and the Onalaska Cadets, now the "Boy Scouts," was the first to take up the plan in this section and he claims the Holmen Cadets were the first similar organization in the state. The work is, therefore, far from the experimental stage in this section. The Holmen Cadets under the leadership of Mr. Berg continued a successful existence for a number of years and six years ago the Onalaska Cadets were organized by Mr. Berg. Last July they became members of the Boy Scouts organization and at present are being equipped with uniforms and other accouterments. Edwin T. Berg is still in command and is scout master of the patrol at Onalaska.

Has Crack Patrol

The Onalaska organization is composed of two patrols, each of eight men and three officers. The first is completed and the second is in process of organization. The first patrol, or crack squad, are the old Onalaska Cadets and Scoutmaster Berg challenges any military organization in the state to compete with them in drill or tactics. The members of the first patrol are M. Frederickson, corporal; B. Nichols, bugler; E. Berg, patrol leader, and R. Frederickson, E. Hogan, F. Hyatte, C. Wilhelm, B. Aldrich, E. Kommerstad, V. Ellis and M. Berg, privates.

Some of the Recreations

Some of the recreations indulged in by the Onalaska patrols are long distance tramps, drills and the annual encampment, when strict military rules are followed. Every Saturday evening the Scouts assemble at the town hall for drill and the first patrol has attracted wide attention wherever they have drilled. The commander recently challenged the two La Crosse militia companies to a test drill at the fair grounds, but the drill was rejected.

In August the annual encampment—Camp Richmond—was held on French Island and the boys were taught to live as frontiersmen did.

E. T. Berg, scout master, is an enthusiast on the question of boy scout organizations. "I have had the boy problem in hand for many years," he says, "and I consider it one of the best things any man could do, not only for the good of the boys and his country, but for himself. Men ought to cut loose again for a few hours each week and be boys again, get out into the open air and come into contact with God's wonderful creation; forget for a moment the sordid business of getting money. There is something so big about it all in the woods, and the 'square deal' is so much in evidence

GUBERNATORIAL SITUATION IN IOWA

DES MOINES, Iowa.—While Iowa is always considered good fighting ground by the democrats, this year they are unusually active in opposing a re-election of Governor B. F. Carroll. Claude R. Porter of Centerville, democratic nominee for governor, began his campaign at Sioux City on September 20. Since then he has been losing no time and is making as many speeches as possible. The democratic central committee has planned its fight by congressional districts. This is partially due to the confidence on the part of the democratic leaders that Iowa's one democratic congressman may not feel so lonely at Washington after the coming November election.

Although the democrats are making a speech making campaign, the republicans are pursuing opposite tactics. Republican leaders are averse to a speaking campaign. Nevertheless Governor Carroll announced that he will go "on the hustings" and will attempt by automobile to cover as large a section of the state as possible.

J. M. Hixon defeated G. H. Gordon, 3 up and 1 to play.

A special match against bogey was played on the links Saturday afternoon for a dozen balls. H. J. Hirshheimer and C. J. Felber tied for first place with 3 up, the former winning when lots were cast. P. M. Gelatt had the next best score, 1 up, and the others finished in the following order: J. M. Hixon, G. W. Burton, and E. J. Evans, all 2 down; A. A. Morse, 4 down; Emil Niemeyer, 5 down; F. H. Hankerson, 5 down; F. A. Copeland, 6 down; C. S. Van Auker, 5 down; G. Van Steenwyk, 7 down; Walter Holmes, 7 down; G. M. Heath, 9 down.

TWO GOLF PLAYERS TO PLAY OFF A TIE

In Saturday's flight in the golf tournament on the Country Club links three close contests were played. One week remains for play, the semi-finals being scheduled at the convenience of the contestants, and the finals to be played next Saturday. A match open to all club members will also be played after which a pancake dinner will be served for the entire club, the losing entertaining the winners.

HORSE IS KILLED;
STRUCK BY A CAR

A horse owned by Clark & Clark and driven by Contractor John White, was struck by a street car Saturday afternoon on Main between Thirtieth and Fourteenth street, resulting in its death and Mr. White was painfully injured. Mr. White was driving along the street with his wagon loaded with barrels. The rubbing of the barrels made so much noise that the approaching street car was not heard. As he drove across the car track in front of the car a collision occurred, overturning the wagon and throwing the driver to the pavement. The latter hung to the reins and the horse dragged him for some distance. The horse sustained a broken leg and had to be shot. Mr. White was taken to the office of Dr. G. J. Egan, and his injuries were cared for. The most serious injury was the loss of the end of one thumb. He was later removed to his home, 1233 South Fourth street.

CENSUS CHANGES
MANY DISTRICTS

Numerous Counties in the State May Lose Members in the Legislature

In the rush of other events the fact seems to have been lost sight of that the legislature of 1911 must reapportion the state from congressional districts down to assembly districts.

The constitution of the state provides that there shall be a reapportionment of the state legislative districts after the state census, which was held every ten years so as to come just between the United States census. The state census has been discontinued, hence there is now a reapportionment only once in ten years.

It is probable that there will be quite a change in the political geography of the state when the new reapportionment map is completed. The population of Wisconsin has been given at 2,500,000. On this basis each assembly district should have a population of 25,000. Each senatorial district should contain 77,000. With such ratios a glance at the districts as they are now constituted and their population shows there are a half a dozen counties at least which will have to lose one assemblyman and the same number of senatorial districts fall so far below the new ratio that they will have to be changed.

It takes a smart man to make money out of his own failures
